Cloning terror : the war of images, 9/11 to the present.
W.J.T. Mitchell
Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 2011
2011/314 ,7.01,MI:T"2011
Exploring the role of verbal and visual images in the War on Terror, Mitchell finds a conflict whose shaky metaphoric and imaginary conception has created its own reality. At the same time, Mitchell locates in the concept of clones and cloning an anxiety about new forms of image-making that has amplified the political effects of the War on Terror. Cloning and terror, he argues, share an uncanny structural resemblance, shuttling back and forth between imaginary and real, metaphoric and literal manifestations

On the aesthetic education of man. Friedrich Schiller; transl. by Reginald Snell
New York: Dover, 2004
2011/310 ,7.01,SC:HI"2004
A classic of eighteenth-century thought, Schiller's treatise on the role of art in society ranks among German philosophy's most profound works. An important contribution to the history of ideas, it employs a political analysis of contemporary society - and of the French Revolution, in particular - to define the relationship between beauty and art. Schiller's proposal of art as fundamental to the development of society and the individual remains an influential concept and this volume offers his philosophy's clearest, most relevant expression

Warburg's Mnemosyne Atlas brought together graphical materials from his research and lectures in a series of large-format plates on various topics that demonstrated the legacy of antiquity in the imagery of later epochs, from the Renaissance and the Baroque to the early 20th century.

I read where I am : exploring new information cultures.
compiles by Mieke Gerritzen, Geert Lovink, Minke Kampman
Amsterdam: Valiz, 2011
2011/350 ,7.011,EX:P"2011
I Read Where I Am contains visionary texts about the future of reading and the status of the word. We read anytime and anywhere. We read of screens, we read out on the streets, we read in the office but less and less we read a book at home on the couch. We are, or are becoming, a different type of reader. The question remains which shape will it take and what experience does one want? To answer all these (and other) questions we have asked people from different backgrounds, subject to the aforementioned changes, to think about these issues.

Community art : the politics of trespassing. Paul de Bruyne & Pascal Gielen
Amsterdam: Valiz, 2011
2011/349 ,7.015,CO:M"2011
'Every kind of change belongs to a form of community art', states the Italian philosopher

Antonio Negri. This is the inverse of the premise that community art can be integral component of desired social changes. Negri confronts community art, its supporters and critics with a challenging responsibility, and extends this to include everyone who wants to bring about change in social, political, economic, technological or ecological arenas. Communal and artistic go hand in hand. In Community Art, artists and theorists employ diverse modes of thinking and writing to explore the practices and concepts of the phenomenon of community art in western and non-western societies. The book does not offer a cut-and-dried theoretical model, but presents a new critical reformulation of community art in society

Too active to act : cultureel activisme na het einde van de geschiedenis. BAVO (Gideon Boie, Matthias Pauwels)

Amsterdam: Valiz, 2010
2011/090 .7.015.2,BA:V"2011 1)
In dit boek stelt BAVO de vraag naar cultureel activisme en het engagement waarvan het getuigt. Hoe doeltreffend is deze kunstproductie? Heeft deze vorm van cultureel activisme een werkelijk emanciperend en veranderend effect? Kunnen deze cultureel activisten vanuit hun ingebedde positie nog een waarachtige politiek en maatschappelijke invloed uitoefenen?

Locating the producers : durational approaches to public art. Paul O'Neill & Claire Doherty

Amsterdam: Valiz, 2011
2011/348 ,,7.15.6,LO:C"2011
Locating the Producers explores how 'durational' processes to public art curating and commissioning have emerged as an alternative to nomadic, itinerant and short-termist approaches in recent years. It provides an in-depth analysis of five durational projects as its starting point: The Blue House, and Beyond, the Netherlands, Trekroneer Art Plan, Denmark, and Creative Egremont, and the Edgware Road Project, United Kingdom.

Zur Vorstellung des Terrors Die RAF. Klaus Biesenbach (Hg.)

Gottingen: Steidl, 2005
2011/306 ,7.015.4,ZU:R"2005
In two ways, the curatorial principle of the exhibition takes account of the perception of the RAF formed in and through the media. On the one hand, by citing and displaying examples of this media presence in the form of 29 dates tied to the history of the RAF's terrorism in the 1970s. Here one can see what one could see at that time and what, in this "being seen", decisively molded the "imagining of terror and the imagining of the RAF" in West German society. On the other hand and at the same time, it is made clear to the viewer that the artistic grappling with this perception of a reality created by the media is multi-dimensionally differentiated and makes it more directly and differently experiential.

Several of his sculptures are here illustrated for the first time or newly photographed for the book. The textual works set a special accent that is still not very well known despite their key role in the overall work.

The first part of Ki-da Rilke features a transcription and drawings of Rilke's collection "New Poems" (1907) in the German original and on thin sheets of paper and notepads. The second part features Kim's drawings inspired by Rilke's "Sonnets to Orpheus" (1923), which are then further developed in the book's third part, which comprises an independent picture story featuring recurring characters. These figures are named in an index on loose sheets of paper.

Leiden: Primavera Pers, 2011
2011/309 ,75.LAIRESSE,3
Gerard de Lairese (1641-1711) was the most successful Dutch painter of his time, admired by the patricians of Amsterdam and the court of William iii of Orange. An eighteenth-century critic called him 'undoubtedly the greatest genius there ever was in painting'. After a century of neglect his rehabilitation began in 1970 when the Amsterdam Rijksmuseum acquired a series of his monumental grisaille paintings. In an international exhibition (Cologne, Cassel, Dordrecht 2007) he was presented as the leading artist of his time, the last quarter of the seventeenth century. As part of this rehabilitation process, interest in his writings also increased. De Lairese wrote a booklet on the art of drawing (1701) and a manual on painting (1707).

New York conversations. Anton Vidokle

DVD-612
New York Conversations is a text film. Shot in a Chinatown storefront converted for this occasion into an improvised kitchen/restaurant, the film documents three days of public conversations between artists, critics, curators, and a free floating public. The talks, lunches, and dinners were organized by Rirkrit Tiravanija, Nico Dockx, and Anton Vidokle in response to an invitation by Brussels-based art journal A Prior to be the subject of their new issue. Instead of commissioning essays or producing artwork to be printed in the journal, the artists decided to rethink the structure by which an art publication is produced and to attempt to do this discursively in a public setting. With Francisca Benitez, Nico Dockx, Daniel Faust, Media Farzin, Liam Gillick, Egon Hanfstingl, Jörg Heiser, Steven Kaplan, Shama Khana, Anders Kreuger, Miwon Kwon, Valerie Mannaerts, Sis Matthé, Hadley Nunes, Saul Ostrow, Marti Peran, Simon Rees, Els Roelandt, Dieter Roelstraete, Martha Rosler, Joe Scanlan, Maxwell Stephen, Monika Szewczyk, Rirkrit Tiravanija, Jan Verwoert, Anton Vidokle, Lawrence Weiner, Andrea Wiarda, Louwrien Wijers, and others.
